Serum carcinoembryonic antigen (CEA) and carbohydrate antigen (CA) 19-9 were measured before operation in 54 patients with gastrointestinal tumors (13 gastric cancers, 14 colon cancers, 5 hepatocellular carcinomas, 5 pancreatic cancers and 17 others). The sensitivity and specificity were found to be 73.7 and 100.0% for CEA, 74.4 and 100.0% for CA 19-9, respectively. Elevated CEA and CA 19-9 tended to increase in the patients who had cancerous lesions of the digestive tract. However, the increase was not related to histologic type of tumor. The elevation of CEA and CA 19-9 seems to appear early and often in the course of tumor growth. The serial measurement of these tumor markers will be important to determine the extent of disease.

Body mass index as an independent risk factor for occult metastatic disease in patients with prostate cancer. To investigate the risk of occult metastasis in patients with low-risk prostate cancer and to assess the association between body mass index (BMI) and the risk of occult metastasis. Between September 2001 and December 2003, 233 men underwent transrectal ultrasound-guided biopsies and biopsies of three or more sites of the prostate. Patients were classified into one of three groups according to the presence and location of metastases on biopsy: group I--metastasis at or within the prostatic capsule; group II--metastasis at or within the periprostatic fat; group III--metastasis at or within the seminal vesicles and/or the base of the prostate. BMI was calculated in all patients. There were 50 patients in group I, 105 patients in group II and 78 patients in group III. The prevalence of metastasis in group I was 12.2%, in group II 36.2% and in group III 44.4%. BMI was significantly lower in group I than in group III (median 29.4 kg/m(2) vs. 30.8 kg/m(2); P 25 kg/m(2)) (P 25 kg/m(2)) (P = 0.0001). Multivariate analysis showed that the risk of occult metastasis in the whole group was 1.72 times greater for men with a low than a high BMI (P = 0.01). In patients with low-risk prostate cancer, BMI is an important independent risk factor for occult metastasis. Peter Medawar Peter Medawar (; 26 December 1908 - 18 February 1977
