Consequently, it is possible that the chemokine environment is not homogenous within a population and that the level of M2-like TAM will be different. These hypotheses should be further tested by culturing tumor cells with different chemokine profiles and/or over-expressing/depleting chemokines/receptors. A previous study showed that in melanoma cells, tumor-associated macrophages promote the establishment of angiogenic factor production, thus inducing the development of a more aggressive tumor phenotype \[@CR30\]. Our data do not support this hypothesis since the co-culture model is an indirect one and we did not observe angiogenic factor production by the tumor cells. Conclusion {#Sec19} ===== Our findings suggest that in tumors with M2-like TAM, the PD-L1 expression might be a marker of increased lymphocytic infiltration, and thus the more intensive anti-PD-1/PD-L1 immune checkpoint therapy may be effective in these tumors. Additional files {#Sec20} ===== Additional file 1: Figure S1.Flow cytometry analysis of PD-L1 expression on tumor cells. The graph shows PD-L1 expression of UCC-TCC-1 (P1), UCC-TCC-2 (P2), and UCC-TCC-3 (P3) cell lines before
