Explore vast lands and discover unknown threats, while cooperating with other adventurers to overcome your trials. Determinants of total and liver-specific albumin synthesis in the rat. The regulation of protein synthesis was studied during severe nutritional sodium deficiency and at the end of insulin treatment of diabetic rats. Albumin synthesis decreased in all organs studied, including the liver. As a consequence of the drop in liver albumin synthesis, there was a general decrease in the total protein synthesis in the liver and other organs. Metabolic signals, such as intraportal injection of arginine, alone were unable to restore total liver protein synthesis. However, when arginine is followed by insulin treatment, there is an increase in the total protein synthesis and albumin synthesis in the liver of diabetic animals. These results suggest that insulin, either directly or indirectly, was responsible for the increase in albumin synthesis in the liver. The increase in albumin synthesis in the liver of diabetic animals can be explained by the existing changes in the relative amount of the different hepatocyte polysomes engaged in protein synthesis. Therefore, our results show that insulin can increase the total and the liver-specific protein synthesis in the liver by increasing the number of polysomes involved in protein synthesis.Q: Помощь разработчиков в использовании утилиты прошивки на ubuntu 16.04 У меня на стороне сервера установлена прошивка Ubuntu 16.04, на другой стороне линукс версии 14.04.
